Christine Barbour, Senior Lecturer
(Ph.D., Indiana University, 1990)

Professor Barbour teaches American Politics. She is currently writing an American politics textbook with Gerald Wright.

William T. Bianco, Professor
(Ph.D., University of Rochester, 1987)

Research Interests: Congress, legislatures, formal theory, innovation

William Bianco received his PhD from the University of Rochester in 1987, and has held tenured positions at Indiana, Pennsylvania State University, and Duke University, and visiting positions at Harvard University, Stanford University, and The Brookings Institution. His current research centers on American Politics and legislative institutions, in particular a study of political influence on innovation and scientific research. He is the author of Trust: Representatives and Constituents as well as numerous scholarly articles and was PI or Co-PI on six National Science Foundation grants and a grant from the National Council for Eurasian and Eastern European Studies. He was Fulbright Senior Scholar at National Research University - Higher School of Economics in Moscow, Russia during 2011-2.

Jack Bielasiak, Professor
(Ph.D., Cornell University, 1975)

Professor Bielasiak's interests are in the fields of comparative politics, with a special interest in the process of democratization and in electoral and party systems. His major emphasis is on the transformation of post-communist societies in East Europe and the former Soviet Union. His research has focused on political participation and decision-making processes (e.g. articles in American Political Science Review, Studies in Comparative Communism, East European Quarterly, International Journal of Politics, and edited collections), on the political crisis in Poland (editor of Poland Today, and of Polish Politics: Edge of the Abyss, and numerous articles), and on reform in post-communist systems (publications in several journals such as Economic and Industrial Democracy Journal, East European Politics and Societies, and edited books). His current research and writing focus on a global comparison of electoral processes and party institutionalization in emerging democracies, involving West European, Latin American, and post-communist cases (articles in Comparative Politics, Party Politics, Europe-Asia Studies, Communist and Post-Communist Studies, Studies in Public Policy, and several edited volumes).

In conjunction with these interests, Professor Bielasiak teaches courses on Regime Transitions, Political Democratization, East European Politics, and Post-Communist Politics. Beyond this area, he is also involved in the study and teaching of 20th century genocides, offering courses on the Holocaust and Politics, The Politics of Genocide, and Political Tyranny. He has received university and APSA awards for outstanding teaching. Professor Bielasiak has served as Director of the Polish Studies Program at Indiana University, and as Associate Director of American Studies at the University of Warsaw. He also held the Fulbright Distinguished Chair at the University of Warsaw. Professor Bielasiak served as Associate Chair and Director of Undergraduate Studies in IU's Political Science department.

Eileen Braman, Associate Professor

(Ph.D., Ohio State, 2004)

Research Interests: judicial politics; political psychology, government powers, public opinion

Professor Braman received her JD from Fordham University Law School in 1996 and a Ph.D. in Political Science from Ohio State University in 2004. Her book Law Politics and Perception: How Policy Views Influence Legal Reasoning (Charlottesville: University of Virginia 2009) investigates the cognitive processes involved in legal reasoning. In it she explores how policy preferences interact with case facts and accepted legal norms to shape judgments. The book was the Winner of the C. Herman Pritchett Award for best book on Law and Courts in 2009 from the Law and Courts section of the American Political Science Association. Other recent and notable work include, "Normative Legitimacy: Rules of Appropriateness in Citizens' Assessments of Individual Judicial Decisions" (with Beth Easter Justice System Journal, 2014), "Path Dependence in Studies of Legal Decision Making," (with Mitch Pickerill) in What's Law Got to Do With It, Edited by Charles Geyh (Stanford, 2011), "Searching for Constraint in Legal Decision Making," in The Psychology of Judicial Decision Making, Edited by David Klein and Gregory Mitchell (Oxford, 2010) and "Can a Muslim Represent You?" (With Abdulkader Sinno Politics and Religion, 2009). She has served on the Editorial Boards of Journal of Politics and Justice System Journal. Professor Braman's research interests in American politics include political decision-making (broadly defined), Congress/Court relations and the determinants of public support for government action. Her teaching interests include Constitutional Law, Judicial Process and Political Psychology.

Edward Carmines, Distinguished Professor; Warner O. Chapman Professor; James H. Rudy Professor

(Ph.D., SUNY Buffalo, 1975)

Edward G. Carmines is Distinguished Professor, Warner O. Chapman Professor of Political Science and Rudy Professor at Indiana University. He is also the director of the Center on American Politics and the research director at the Center on Representative Government at Indiana University. His research focuses on American politics, especially elections, public opinion, and political behavior. He has published widely in the major journals in the discipline including the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, and Journal of Politics. He is the coauthor of six books, two of which, Issue Evolution: Race and Transformation of American Politics, with James A. Stimson (Princeton University Press 1992), and Reaching beyond Race, with Paul M. Sniderman (Harvard University Press 1997), won the American Political Science Association's Gladys M. Kammerer Award for the best book in the field of U.S. national policy. In 2012 Issue Evolution was awarded the Philip E. Converse Award from the American Political Science Association for an outstanding and influential book published at least five years ago. Four of his papers presented at academic conferences have won outstanding paper awards, including the Franklin L. Burdette Pi Sigma Alpha Award, the Pi Sigma Alpha Award, and the Chastain Award.

Professor Carmines was a Visiting Professor at the University of Oxford in 1998, a Fellow at the Center for the Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University in 2000-01 and in the spring semester, 2012, and a Fellow at the Center for the Study of Democratic Politics at Princeton University in 2006-07. In 1987 he was awarded the AMOCO Award for Distinguished Teaching from Indiana University. He chaired the Department of Political Science at IU for seven years, from 1990 to 1997.

Professor Carmines is currently working on three major research projects, one with Michael Ensley and Michael Wagner that examines how the American public has responded to partisan polarization, a second with Michael Wagner and Jessica Gerrity focusing on public evaluations of Congress, and a third with J. Merrill Shanks, Henry Brady, and Douglas Strand that examines the role that voters' policy preferences have played in their electoral decisions in recent presidential and congressional elections.

He is an elected Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a past President of the Midwest Political Science Association.

Aurelian Craiutu, Professor; Director of Undergraduate Studies, Associate Chair
(Ph.D., Princeton, 1999)

Research Interests: French political thought, Tocqueville, moderation, liberalism, conservatism

Aurelian Craiutu (Ph.D. Princeton, 1999) is Professor in the Department of Political Science at Indiana University, Bloomington, and Adjunct Professor in the American Studies Program. He is also affiliated with the Russian and East European Institute, the Institute for European Studies, the Ostrom Workshop, and the Lilly School of Philanthropic Studies. Prior to coming to Indiana, he taught at Duke University and the University of Northern Iowa. In 2010, he was Visiting Professor at the University of Paris-11, Pantheon-Assas and in 2005 and 2006, he was Visiting Professor at the National School of Political Studies and Public Administration, Bucharest, Romania.

Craiutu's research interests include French political and social thought (Montesquieu, Tocqueville, Constant, Madame de Stael, Guizot, Aron), political ideologies (liberalism, conservatism) as well as theories of transition to democracy and democratic consolidation (mostly Central and Eastern Europe). He is the author and editor of several books on modern political thought. His first monograph, Liberalism under Siege: The Political Thought of the French Doctrinaires (Rowman & Littlefield/Lexington Books, 2003), won a 2004 CHOICE Outstanding Academic Title Award. It was also translated into French in a revised and enlarged edition as Le centre introuvable: la pensée politique des doctrinaires' sous la Restauration (Plon, 2006). His two most recent books are A Virtue for Courageous Minds: Moderation in French Political Thought, 1748-1830 (Princeton University Press, 2012) and Faces of Moderation: The Art of Balance in an Age of Extremes (University of Pennsylvania Press, 2016). Dr. Craiutu also published two books in political theory in Romanian, In Praise of Liberty: Essays in Political Philosophy, (1998), and In Praise of Moderation (2006), both with Polirom Publishing House, one of the country's leading presses.

He has also edited six books: François Guizot, History of the Origins of Representative Government in Europe (Liberty Fund, 2002); Germaine de Stael, Considerations on the Principal Events of the French Revolution (Liberty Fund, 2008); America through European Eyes (co-edited with Jeffrey C. Isaac, Penn State University Press, 2009); Conversations with Tocqueville (co-edited with Sheldon Gellar, Lexington Books, Rowman & Littlefield, 2009); Tocqueville on America after 1840: Letters and Other Writings (with Jeremy Jennings, Cambridge University Press, 2009), as well as Dialog și libertate: Eseuri în onoarea lui Mihai ora [Dialogue and Liberty: Essays in Honor of Mihai ora], edited by Aurelian Craiutu & Sorin Antohi (Bucharest: Nemira Publishing House, 1997) [in Romanian].

Dr. Craiutu's articles and reviews have been published in many academic journals including American Political Science Review, Perspectives on Politics, The Review of Politics, History of Political Thought, Political Theory, European Journal of Political Theory, and History of European Ideas. He served as Associate Editor of the European Journal of Political Theory (2004-14).

Professor Craiutu has received awards, fellowships, and grants from several institutions including the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, the James Madison Program (Princeton University), the American Council of Learned Societies, and the Earhart Foundation. In 2000, he won the American Political Science Association's Leo Strauss Award for the best doctoral dissertation in the field of political theory. In 2004, he received a Student Choice Award and an Outstanding Junior Faculty Award at Indiana University.

He is currently working on a book manuscript on moderation and the rise of democracy in France, 1830-1880 and is preparing for Liberty Fund a new translation and annotated edition of Jacques Necker's on the Executive Power in Large States (1792).

Vanessa Cruz Nichols, Assistant Professor

(Ph.D., Political Science, University of Michigan, 2017; M.A., Political Science, University of Michigan, 2012; B.A., Political Science and Economics, DePaul University)

Research Interests: Latino politics, political participation, public opinion, identity politics, and experiments

My research interests fall within the scope of Latino politics, political participation, public opinion, identity politics and experiments. My dissertation, "Latinos Rising to the Challenge: Political Responses to Threat and Opportunity Messages," focuses on mobilizing messages and how they might create a more engaged or disengaged citizenry. My research aims to re-assess the hypothesis that threat is the main mobilizing catalyst for heightened political participation. I argue that our understanding of threat has suffered from poor measurement issues that contradict the theoretical underpinnings of a contentious political context, one involving cues about potential policy losses and policy gains. In short, policy threat has overwhelmingly been simplified and operationalized as a dichotomous variable consisting of either the presence or the absence of threat. As a result of focusing too narrowly on threat, my research intends to show that the majority of studies accounting for the effects of one's political context tend to suffer from an omitted variable bias—the motivating effects of policy opportunities. Thus, an important determinant of threat's effectiveness is the political context in which it is used. My most recent co-authored publications and works in progress involve the 1.) the spillover effects of immigration policy enforcement in the domain of political/civic engagement among Latinos living in counties with higher immigrant deportation levels, and 2.) whitewashing cues minority political candidates use to minimize racial and partisan opposition.

Jacek Dalecki, Senior Lecturer

(Ph.D., Indiana University, 1997; M.A., Warsaw University, 1985)

Professor Jacek Dalecki teaches a broad range of subjects, including American Political Controversies, Politics of Terrorism, Law, Classical and Modern Political Thought, and Anti-politics. His primary interests revolve around the relations between society and state, the mechanisms of political obedience, and continuities and discontinuities in political thought.

Before taking his current position, he held jobs as a journalist, radio engineer, bookseller, delivery driver, director of several mentoring programs, and academic advisor, to name just a few. Professor Dalecki is originally from Poland and, if asked, he can speak Polish.

Christopher DeSante, Associate Professor

(Ph.D., Duke University, 2012)

Professor DeSante received his Ph.D. from Duke University in 2012 and was a visiting professor at Oberlin College from 2012-2013. He joined the faculty at IU in August 2013 and will teach courses in political psychology, American political behavior, and quantitative methods. His research is on race and racism in America, American political partisanship, and political methodology.

Judy Faller, Associate Professor

(Ph.D., Princeton University, 1995)

Professor Faller's interests lay at the intersection of public law, political philosophy, and ethics and public policy. Her dissertation explored the problem of specifying who qualifies for which rights by examining the practice of civil commitment of the homeless mentally ill. She aims to propose a more adequate justification of why people qualify for rights and full citizenship. Professor Faller has presented her research related to homelessness and rights-talk at the New York University School of Law and at annual meetings of the American Political Science Association. In addition, she has co-authored an article in Educational Policy on the failure of political efforts to desegregate the public schools in Yonkers, New York. Professor Faller teaches courses on constitutional interpretation, the politics of civil liberties, ethics and public policy, and jurisprudence. Professor Failer is an assistant professor in Political Science and American Studies.

Sumit Ganguly, Rabindranath Tagore Professor; Distinguished Professor

(Ph.D., University of Illinois, Urbana/Champaign, 1984)

Research Interests: international security, nuclear proliferation, ethnic conflict, South Asia

Sumit Ganguly is a Distinguished Professor of Political Science and holds the Rabindranath Tagore Chair in Indian Cultures and Civilizations at Indiana University, Bloomington. Professor Ganguly has previously taught at James Madison College of Michigan State University, Hunter College and the Graduate Center of the City University of New York and the University of Texas at Austin. He has been a Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, DC, a Visiting Fellow at the Center for International Security and Cooperation and at the Center on Democracy, Development and the Rule of Law at Stanford University, a Guest Scholar at the Center for Cooperative Monitoring in Albuquerque and a Visiting Scholar at the German Institute for International and Area Studies in Hamburg. He has also held the Asia Chair at Sciences Po in Paris, and the Ngee Ann Chair in International Politics at the Rajaratnam School for International Studies at Nanyang Technological University in Singapore, a Distinguished Visiting Fellow at the Institute for Defense Studies and Analysis in New Delhi and the Buffet Professor at Northwestern University for 2013-2014. In the 2017- 2018, he was a Visiting Professor at the Strategic Studies Institute of the US Army War College. He will spend the summer of 2018 as an Alexander von Humboldt Fellow at the University of Heidelberg.

Professor Ganguly is a Senior Fellow at the Foreign Policy Research Institute, a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He is an Associate Editor of International Security and serves on the editorial boards of the Asian Security, Current History, the Journal of Democracy, Foreign Policy Analysis, The India Review, The Nonproliferation Review, Pacific Affairs and Security Studies. In the spring of 2018 he launched a new, bi-annual, refereed, open-access journal, Indian Politics and Policy, for the Policy Studies Organization. He is also an Associate Editor of Security Studies. A specialist on the contemporary politics of South Asia is the author, co-author, editor or co-editor of 20 books on the region. His most recent books are the Oxford Short Introduction to Indian Foreign Policy (Oxford University Press, 2015), Deadly Impasse: India-Pakistani Relations at the Dawn of a New Century (Cambridge University Press, 2016), (with William R. Thompson), Ascending India and Its State Capacity (Yale University Press, 2017) and the co-editor (with Nicolas Blarel and Manjeet Pardesi) of The Oxford Handbook of India's National Security (Oxford University Press, 2018) He is currently at work on a book that focuses on the origins and evolution of India's defense policy for Columbia University Press.

Timothy Hellwig, Professor; Academic Director, IU Europe Gateway in Berlin, Germany;
Henry Remak Professor, Institute for European Studies
(Ph.D., University of Minnesota, 2004)

Research Interests: comparative political behavior, political economy, political parties, European politics, Latin American politics

Timothy Hellwig is Professor of Political Science at Indiana University. He holds a B.A. from St. Cloud State University, an M.A. from American University, and a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota. He has been a researcher at the International Foundation for Election Systems, on the faculty at the University of Houston, and a visiting researcher at the Australian National University, Gothenburg University, and the University of Essex. He previously served as Director of the Institute for European Studies in Indiana University's School of Global and International Studies. His interests are in comparative political economy, political behavior, European politics, public policy, and research methods. He is author of Globalization and Mass Politics: Retaining the Room to Maneuver (Cambridge University Press), and his work appears in several journals and book chapters, including the American Journal of Political Science, the British Journal of Political Science, and the Journal of Politics. He is currently working on three research projects: a book on electoral cleavages in western democracies after the Global Financial Crisis, a series of articles on the economic bases of executive approval around the world, and a book comparing the impact of globalization on domestic politics in Brazil, France, and the United States.

Jeffrey C. Isaac, James H. Rudy Professor (Ph.D., Yale University, 1983)

Jeffrey C. Isaac is James H. Rudy Professor of Political Science at Indiana University, Bloomington. He served as Editor in Chief of Perspectives on Politics, a flagship journal of the American Political Science Association, from 2009-2017, and in 2017 was awarded APSA's Frank J. Goodnow Award for Distinguished Public Service to the profession for his work. He has published five books, edited two anthologies, and published over 75 articles and essays. He is a Contributing Editor at Public Seminar, where he writes a weekly column called Blue Monday (<http://www.publicseminar.org/author/jisaac/>). He writes about politics regularly at Common Dreams, and also writes occasionally for Dissent, the Nation, Los Angeles Review of Books, and the Guardian. His book #AgainstTrump: Notes from Year One, was published in late 2018 by Public Seminar Books/OR Books.

Ore Koren, Assistant Professor
(Ph.D., Political Science, University of Minnesota, 2018; M.Sc., Applied Economics, University of Minnesota, 2016; M.A., Political Science, University of Minnesota, 2016; A.B., Government (honors) and history, cum laude, Dartmouth College, 2012)

Ore Koren (Ph.D., Minnesota 2018) is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Indiana University, specializing in international relations and research methodology. Koren completed his PhD at the University of Minnesota, where he also obtained a MScin Applied Economics. Previously, Koren was a pre-doctoral fellow at the Dickey Center at Dartmouth College and a Jennings Randolph Peace Scholar at the United States Institute of Peace. Within international relations, his research has involved innovative approaches to studying the causes of civil conflict and political violence. His methodological interests include limited dependent variable models and applied Bayesian statistics, mixed and combined methods approaches, and event data. Koren's work has appeared or is forthcoming in multiple academic journals and has been mentioned in numerous policy outlets. He has also coauthored a book, The Politics of Mass Killing in Autocratic Regimes, which was published in June 2018.

Lauren M. MacLean, Professor and Chair; Arthur Bentley Chair
(Ph.D., University of California at Berkeley, 2002; M.A., University of California at Berkeley, 1995; B.A., University of Pennsylvania, 1991)

Lauren M. MacLean (Ph.D. University of California-Berkeley, 2002) is the Arthur F. Bentley Chair and Professor in the Department of Political Science. She is an affiliate faculty member of Indiana University's Ostrom Workshop, the African Studies Program, the Committee on Native American and Indigenous Studies, and the Center on Philanthropy. Her research interests are comparative political economy and public policy, with a focus on the politics of state formation, public service provision, and citizenship in Africa and the U.S.

In her first book, Informal Institutions and Citizenship in Rural Africa: Risk and Reciprocity in Ghana and Cote d'Ivoire (Cambridge University Press, 2010; winner of the APSA 2011 Sartori Book Award; finalist for the ASA Herskovits Award), MacLean theorizes that divergent histories of state formation help explain variation in informal institutions and everyday practices of citizenship in two similar cross-border regions of Ghana and Cote d'Ivoire. With Melani Cammett (Harvard University), MacLean theorizes the origins, dynamics, and consequences of non-state provision in the Global South in a special issue of Studies of Comparative and International Development as well as an edited volume, The Politics of Non-State Social Welfare (Cornell University Press, 2014). MacLean has also conducted fieldwork for a project on the politics of tribal consultation analyzing participatory health policymaking across the 34 states with federally recognized tribes in the U.S.

Most recently, MacLean is investigating the politics of public service provision in the electricity sector in Africa. She was selected as a 2017 Carnegie Fellow to investigate how electricity provision may promote democracy and environmental sustainability in Ghana. She is also collaborating with Jennifer Brass (IU-SPEA), Christopher Gore (Ryerson University, Canada) and Elizabeth Baldwin (University of Arizona) on a comparative project analyzing the politics of electricity provision in Ghana, Kenya, and Uganda. MacLean has also published articles in a range of journals including Comparative Political Studies, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Environmental and Resource Economics, the International Journal of Public Administration, the Journal of Development Studies, Journal of Modern African Studies, Studies in Comparative International Development, and World Development.

MacLean is also known nationally and internationally for her work on the topic of field research methodology. She has co-authored a book, Field Research in Political Science (Cambridge University Press, 2015), with Diana Kapiszewski and Ben Read. MacLean has taught field research methodology regularly at the two-week Institute for Qualitative and Multi-Method Research (IQMR) held at Syracuse University in June. With NSF support, MacLean has helped to facilitate the participation of a small group of African scholars based at African higher education institutions to participate in IQMR. She served as a co-leader for the APSA Africa Workshop 2012 in Gaborone, Botswana, focused on the theme of "Local Communities and the State in Africa" and a co-leader for the APSA Africa Workshop Alumni Networking Conference at Makerere University in Uganda.

MacLean is the recipient of the 2016 David Collier Mid-Career Achievement Award and the 2017 Carnegie Fellows award. Her research has been supported by grants, including from the National Science Foundation, Social Science Research Council, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and the U.S. Department of Education.

MacLean regularly teaches courses on African politics, comparative politics, politics of governance and corruption, politics of inequality and identity, politics of international development, indigenous and ethnic politics, and qualitative research methods at the undergraduate and graduate level. MacLean has also been recognized for outstanding teaching with four Trustee Teaching Awards since joining Indiana University in 2005.

Armando Razo, Associate Professor, Honors Program Director

(Ph.D., Stanford University, 2003; M.S., Stanford University, 2001; M.A., Stanford University, 1996; B.S., Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1993)

Research Interests: political economy, institutions, development, networks, Latin America

Prof. Armando Razo researches how informal and formal institutions affect economic behavior in developing countries. On the theoretical side, he develops mathematical and computational models to develop clear theories about the impact of social and political networks on economic behavior. He is also engaged in a project that uses tools of computational linguistics to systematize interdisciplinary work on networks and internal development. On a more applied side, he is interested in applying statistical network methods to the study of economic history and policy networks, again with a focus on international development. He is affiliated with the Ostrom Workshop (<http://ostromworkshop.indiana.edu>) and the Indiana University Network Science Institute (<http://iuni.iu.edu>), where he served on the Founding Scientific Leadership Team and currently serves as co-PI of a new Dual Ph.D. degree in Network Science (<https://cns-nrt.indiana.edu/>).

His teaching includes courses on networks and institutions, quantitative contextual analysis, political economy of development, positive political economy, and Latin American politics. He is the author of Social Foundations of Limited Dictatorship (2008), which advances a network theory of private policymaking applicable to different regimes. A student of economic history, he is also co-author with Stephen Haber and Noel Maurer of The Politics of Property Rights (2003). He has published articles in the Journal of Theoretical Politics, World Politics, the Journal of Economic History, and the Journal of Latin American Studies.

William E. Scheuerman, James H. Rudy Professor

(Ph.D., Harvard University, 1993; B.A., Yale University, 1987)

Research Interests: democracy, critical theory, civil disobedience, executive power

Bill Scheuerman's primary research and teaching interests are in modern political thought, German political thought, democratic theory, legal theory, and international political theory. After teaching at Pittsburgh and Minnesota, he joined the Indiana faculty in 2006. Bill's most recent book is Civil Disobedience (Polity Press, 2018). He is also the author of Between the Norm and the Exception: The Frankfurt School and the Rule of Law (MIT, 1994), which won two prestigious awards, as well as Carl Schmitt: The End of Law (Rowman & Littlefield, 1999), Liberal Democracy and the Social Acceleration of Time (Johns Hopkins, 2004), Frankfurt School Perspectives on Globalization, Democracy, and the Law (Routledge 2008), Hans J. Morgenthau: Realism and Beyond (Polity, 2009), and The Realist Case for Global Reform (Polity, 2011). He has edited The Rule of Law Under Siege (California, 1996), From Liberal Democracy to Fascism: Legal and Political Thought in the Weimar Republic (Humanities Press, 2000) (with Peter Caldwell), and High-Speed Society: Social Acceleration, Power, and Modernity (Penn State, 2009) (with Hartmut Rosa). Bill has published in many professional journals, including Constellations, History of Political Thought, International Theory, Journal of Political Philosophy, Politics & Society, Review of International Studies, and Social Research. A recipient of numerous prestigious grants and fellowships, he serves on editorial boards for a number of journals, including Constellations, European Journal of Political Theory, International Relations, Journal of International Political Theory, Review of Politics, and Time & Society. Bill is presently a North American Co-Director for an annual international conference for critical theorists held in Prague.

Abdulkader Sinno, Associate Professor, Placement

Director (Ph.D., UCLA, 2002)

Research Interests: conflicts in Afghanistan and the Middle East, Islamist parties, immigration, representation, Muslim minorities in the West

Abdulkader Sinno is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Middle Eastern Studies at Indiana University, Bloomington. He received his PhD from UCLA in 2002, was a CISAC Postdoctoral Fellow at Stanford University in 2002-03, a 2009 Carnegie Scholar, and a 2014-15 Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center. His first book, Organizations at War in Afghanistan and Beyond (Cornell University Press, 2008; 2010 paperback edition) develops an organizational theory to explain the evolution and outcomes of civil wars, ethnic strife and other territorial conflicts. He is also editor of Muslims in Western Politics (Indiana University Press, 2009) and the author of articles and book chapters on Muslim minority political representation in Western liberal democracies, public attitudes towards Muslim immigration, the Arab Spring, conflict processes, and Islamist parties' participation in elections. His articles are published in both qualitative (e.g., American Historical Review) and quantitative (e.g., Journal of Conflict Resolution) journals.

Regina A. Smyth, Professor

(Ph.D., Duke University, 1997; M.A., Duke University, 1994; B.A., State University of New York, Albany, 1983)

Professor Smyth's research explores the relationship between democratic development and electoral competition by focusing on candidates, political parties and party systems in post-Communist states. Her work is based on original data collection that has been supported by the National Science Foundation, Social Science Research Council, SmithRichardson Foundation, and the National Council for Eurasian and East European Research. Her book Candidate Strategies and Electoral Competition in the Russian Federation: Democracy without Foundation (Cambridge 2006) explains the failure of Russian democracy in terms of the factors that impeded cooperation among candidates and party leaders and failed to produce a viable opposition to the ruling party. Her study of Russian party organizations examines the inability of parties to articulate coherent policy positions or frame policy debates. Her current work on party and party system consolidation across the post-Communist states examines the processes that produce congruence between key political alignments or power centers and partisan competition. Professor Smyth's work has been published in Politics and Society, Comparative Politics, and Comparative Political Studies. Her teaching interests extend from her research. She has taught courses on Russian and Soviet Politics, Democracy and Elections, Comparative Democratic Institutions, Comparative Parties and Party Systems, Voter Turnout, and West European Politics. She has taught at Penn State University and Harvard University before coming to Indiana University in 2006.

Dina Spechler, Associate Professor

(Ph.D., Harvard University, 1973; M.A., Harvard University, 1971; B.A., Radcliffe College, 1965)

Research Interests: foreign policy, foreign policy change, Russian foreign policy, near abroad, American foreign policy

Prof. Dina Spechler teaches courses on Russian foreign policy, American foreign policy, comparative foreign policy, force and diplomacy in the nuclear age, the politics of the UN, and international relations. After receiving her Ph.D. from Harvard University, she began her teaching career at Harvard, where she taught courses on the USSR and international relations. She then moved to Israel, where she taught at Hebrew University and Tel Aviv University before coming to IU. Her primary research interests are in the areas of comparative foreign policy and international relations, particularly Russian, Soviet, and American foreign policy; the foreign policies of the states of the former Soviet Union; and the international relations of the Middle East. Her current research deals with the explanation of major foreign policy change, including case studies of the decisions by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to withdraw Soviet troops from Eastern Europe, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to recognize Israel, and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to recognize the PLO. Prof. Spechler has also been engaged in collaborative research projects on the impact of local leadership and collective action on economic development in rural Tajikistan and on Russia's policies toward its neighbors. Her publications include Putin and His Neighbors: Russia's Policies toward Eurasia; Domestic Influences on Soviet Foreign Policy; Permitted Dissent in the USSR, and Russian Nationalism and Political Stability in the USSR.

Steven Webster, Assistant Professor

(Ph.D., Political Science, Emory University, 2018)

Research Interests: political psychology, political behavior, public opinion, experimental analysis

Steven Webster's research focuses on the nature of political behavior and public opinion within the United States. More specifically, he studies the forces driving mass polarization; how voters form perceptions of political actors, such as candidates, parties, and related political entities; and how signals from party elites shape voters' beliefs and attitudes. In order to shed light on these questions he draws on theories from both political science and psychology. Webster's work has been published in Political Science Research & Methods, Political Behavior, Electoral Studies, American Politics Research, Advances in Political Psychology, American Behavioral Scientist, and Social Science Quarterly.

William Kindred Winecoff, Associate Professor, Director of Graduate Studies, Director of Graduate Admissions

(Ph.D., Political Science, University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill, 2013)

Research Interests: international political economy, finance, trade, network analysis, institutions

I am Associate Professor of Political Science at Indiana University Bloomington, where I have been since taking a PhD in Political Science from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 2013. Most of my research considers the politics of global finance and other networked systems. I primarily focus on structural power in the world economy, the political nature of supposedly technocratic economic institutions, theories of hegemonic financial (in)stability, the relationship between firm-level economic agents and political systems, and the ways in which changes in demographics and predominant technologies impact political economy. I teach courses pertaining to international political economy, international relations, and network methodologies.

Among other outlets I have published in Business and Politics, Global Networks, International Studies Quarterly, Perspectives on Politics, and Review of International Political Economy as well as non-peer-reviewed outlets including Foreign Policy, The National Interest, Symposium, and The Washington Post's The Monkey Cage. I am co-editor of the Handbook of the International Political Economy of Monetary Relations (2014 Edward Elgar), and a guest-editor of a 2017 special issue of Business and Politics on Property Rights, Financial Risk, and the Politics of a Networked Global Financial System (vol 19, issue 2).

Jason Wu, Assistant Professor
(Ph.D., University of California, San Diego, 2018)

Professor Wu received his Ph.D. from the University of California, San Diego in 2018. At Indiana University he teaches courses in Chinese politics, research design, and political behavior.

His research focuses on ideology, public opinion, and political participation in China, and uses survey data to map the belief systems of ordinary citizens under authoritarian rule. His work has appeared in print in the Journal of Theoretical Politics and has been supported by the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation and the Smith Richardson Foundation.

Justyna Zajac, Professor of Practice in European Security Studies and Visiting Professor (Ph.D., Political Science, University of Warsaw, 2004 M.A., International Relations, University of Warsaw, 2001 M.A., Euro-Mediterranean Partnership Studies, Università degli Studi di Catania, 2000)
Research Interests: International security; Euro-Atlantic and European security; foreign policy analysis; Poland's foreign policy

My research interests focus on international relations with special emphasis on international security and foreign policy analysis. In my work - research, publications, and pedagogy - I have been primarily preoccupied with European security, broadly understood, and its Mediterranean and East-Central European aspects. I am also interested in Euro-Atlantic security and political cooperation in the context of global redistribution of power and Russia's revisionist policy, in particular. Additionally, my research includes Poland's foreign and security policy.

I have published numerous books and papers in Poland, France, Germany, Switzerland, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, and Jordan. My most recent book Poland's Security Policy: The West, Russia, and the Changing International Order was published by Palgrave Macmillan in 2016. I have given lectures at various universities in Poland, the United States, Italy, Sweden, Serbia, Kosovo, Turkey, and India. In addition to research, I genuinely enjoy teaching at undergraduate and graduate levels. Among the courses I teach, there are: Theories of International Relations, Introduction to the Study of International Politics, International Politics, Poland's Foreign Policy, Diplomacy, Security, and Governance.

Along with my work in the academia, my interest in analyzing problems at the crossroads of politics, policy, and science comes through public service. I was appointed by the President of the Republic of Poland to serve as a member of the National Strategic Review Committee. I was a member and a Chairperson of the Council of Young Scientists of the Minister of Science and Higher Education and a two-term member of the Steering Committee of the Standing Group on International Relations, European Consortium for Political Research. Finally, I authored a number of expert opinions for Poland's Ministry of Regional Development and National Security Bureau as well as the Friedrich Ebel Stiftung.

Active Emeritus

Norman Furniss, Professor Emeritus (PhD., Harvard University, 1971)

Professor Furniss' academic interests are in the areas of comparative politics and public policy. His research focuses on the problems of modernization and political change in advanced industrial states, with particular attention to the West European experience. He is concerned in particular with the role of property rights, comparative public policy, and political futures for the "welfare state." Professor Furniss has written, with Professor Timothy Tilton, The Case for the Welfare State: From Social Security to Social Equality. He has edited and contributed to Futures for the Welfare State and Turkish Workers in Europe. His articles have been published in Acta Politica, The American Political Science Review, Development and Change, Dissent, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Politics, Political Studies, Public Administration Review, Research in Political Sociology, and World Politics. He has contributed chapters to Roger Benjamin and Stephen Elkin, eds., The Democratic State; Raymond Hall, ed., Ethnic Autonomy-Comparative Dynamics; Harrell Rogers, ed., Public Policy, and Social Institutions; Jerold Waltman and Donley Studlar, eds., Dilemmas of Change in British Politics; and Douglas Ashford, ed., History and Context in Comparative Public Policy.

Marjorie Hershey, Professor Emeritus (PhD., University of Wisconsin, 1972)

Professor Hershey's research and teaching interests focus on political parties, campaigns, and elections. Her research examines the characteristics of party activists, media coverage of political campaigns, and the commonalities among lobbying, framing, persuasion, and the creation of organizational histories by advocacy groups. She writes a widely used textbook on political parties, Party Politics in America, which is now in its 17th edition, and its associated blog posts. She has published three other books of research, plus about four dozen articles in professional journals including the American Journal of Political Science, the Journal of Politics, Public Opinion Quarterly, Party Politics, Polity, Political Communication, The Annals, Social Science Quarterly, and American Politics Quarterly. Her research has also appeared in the form of chapters in edited volumes. She regularly teaches undergraduate courses on Political Parties and Interest Groups and Environmental Policy and graduate courses on American Political Behavior and Teaching Political Science. She is the founding director of the department's program to prepare its graduate students to be excellent teachers, and she also heads the department's undergraduate honors thesis program. She has been fortunate to have received 17 teaching awards from the Indiana University College of Arts and Sciences, the Department of Political Science, the IU Student Alumni Council, Golden Key, Mortar Board, Blue Key, the Indiana University Student Association, Indiana University Continuing Studies, The American Political Science Association, and the AMOCO Foundation, and is the 2019 Sylvia E. Bowman teaching award winner. This award honors exemplary faculty members in areas related to American civilization.

Adjunct Faculty

Claudia Avellaneda, Adjunct Associate Professor (SPEA) (Ph.D., Political Science, Texas A&M University, 2007)

Dr. Claudia N. Avellaneda specializes in governance and public management in developing countries, with an emphasis on local governments. She joined the IU School of Public and Environmental Affairs in 2013, after serving as assistant professor in the Department of Political Science and graduate coordinator of Latin American Studies at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

Her main research interests are decentralization, public policy, innovation, governance, and public management, with a regional focus on Latin America. Specifically, Professor Avellaneda investigates determinants of government performance in Latin American municipalities by focusing on the role of the local chief executive - the mayor.

In her field research, Professor Avellaneda conducts personal interviews and experimental analyses with Latin American mayors. She explores the impact of mayors' education, experience, networking, and political support on social service delivery, public finances, tax collection, and decision-making. She has extended this line of research to Brazilian, Honduran, Colombian, and Salvadorian municipalities. Currently, her research focuses on the Chilean, Mexican, Peruvian, Guatemalan, and Ecuadorian municipalities. Professor Avellaneda serves on the editorial boards of Public Administration Research and Theory, Public Administration Review, Public Management Review, Urban Affairs Review, Fudan Public Administration Review, and Public Service Review (Revista do Servi90 Publico). She is an elected member of the 2017-2021 Public Management Research Association Governing Board.

Jeannine Bell, Adjunct Professor of Law and Louis F. Niezer Faculty Fellow (Law) Ph.D., University of Michigan, 2000

A nationally recognized scholar in the area of policing and hate crime, Bell has written extensively on hate crime and criminal justice issues. Her first book, Policing Hatred: Law Enforcement, Civil Rights, and Hate Crime (New York University Press 2002) is an ethnography of a police hate crime unit. Her book titled Police and Policing Law (Ashgate 2006) is an edited collection that explores law and society scholarship on the police. Her newest book is Hate Thy Neighbor: Move-in Violence and the Persistence of Racial Segregation in American Housing (NYU Press, 2013).

Bell's research is broadly interdisciplinary, touching on both political science and law. In that regard, she has written in the area of qualitative methodology, and she is co-author of Gaining Access: A Practical and Theoretical Guide for Qualitative Researchers (AltaMira Press 2003). Her scholarship has appeared in the Harvard Civil Rights-Civil Liberties Law Review, Rutgers Race & the Law Review, Punishment and Society, and the Michigan Journal of Race and Law. An associate editor of the Law and Society Review, Bell has served a trustee of the Law and Society Association and as a member of the American Political Association's Presidential Taskforce on Political Violence and Terrorism. She was appointed Richard S. Melvin Professor of Law in 2015. In 2018 she was honored with the Leon H. Wallace Teaching Award, the highest teaching award bestowed upon a faculty member.

Gardner Bovingdon, Adjunct Associate Professor (Central Eurasian Studies)
(Ph.D., Cornell University, 2002)

Professor Bovingdon researches politics in contemporary Xinjiang, an autonomous territory in northwest China, as well as Xinjiang's modern history. He is also an expert in historiography in China, as well as nationalism and ethnic conflict.

Jennifer Brass, Adjunct Assistant Professor (SPEA)
(Ph.D., Political Science, University of California at Berkeley, 2010)

Dr. Jennifer N. Brass is an expert on service provision, governance, and state development, with a primary geographic focus on sub-Saharan Africa. Her book, Allies or Adversaries? NGOs and the State in Africa (Cambridge University Press; winner of the 2018 ARNOVA Outstanding Book Award), examines the role that nongovernmental organizations play in service provision, state-society relations, and state development in Kenya. Related to her monograph, Brass's newest research agenda aims to synthesize collective knowledge about the effects and effectiveness of NGOs using systematic review techniques. A second, collaborative project examines the politics and governance of renewable and small-scale electricity provision in developing countries, with a focus on Africa.

Brass's articles have appeared in Governance, World Development, Development and Change, Journal of Development Studies, Journal of Modern African Studies, Annual Review of Environment & Resources, WJREs: Energy & Environment, Journal of Asian and African Studies, and Journal of Public Affairs Education. Brass has conducted extensive field research in Senegal, Djibouti, Kenya and Uganda. She holds a Ph.D. and master's in political science from the University of California, Berkeley, and an undergraduate degree from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

Luis Fuentes-Rohwer, Adjunct Professor of Law and Harry T. Ice Faculty Fellow (Law)
(Ph.D., University of Michigan, 2001)

Professor Fuentes-Rohwer is the Harry T. Ice Faculty Fellow at the Indiana University Maurer School of Law, where he teaches and writes in the areas of civil rights and legal history, with a particular emphasis on constitutional law and the Reconstruction Era. His scholarship focuses on the intersection of race and democratic theory, as reflected in the law of democracy in general and the Voting Rights Act in particular. He is interested in the way that institutions—and especially courts—are asked to craft and implement the ground rules of American politics. He received a J.D. and a Ph.D. from the University of Michigan and an LL.M. from Georgetown. He joined the faculty in 2002.

Beth Gazley, Adjunct Associate Professor (SPEA)
(Ph.D., University of Georgia, 2004)

Professor Beth Gazley is co-founder of the Indiana University Environmental Resilience Institute and co-principal investigator on Prepared for Environmental Change, a Grand Challenge research program at IU. Her focus is on civil society and philanthropic behaviors related to climate change adaptation.

Gazley specializes in nonprofit management, inter-organizational collaboration, the management of membership associations, and volunteerism. Best known for her groundbreaking work on nonprofit-government collaboration, Gazley is a prolific writer and researcher, with more than 60 published works since 2001. She also studies governmental reliance on charities to fund public services.

Gazley spent 16 years in nonprofit fundraising and management consulting before returning to graduate school. A member of the IU faculty since 2004, Gazley has received the Indiana University 2018 W. George Pinnell Award for Service, the 2013 Indiana Campus Compact Brian Douglas Hiltunen Award, and the 2012 Indiana University Board of Trustees Thomas Ehrlich Award (both for contributions to service-learning scholarship), the 2012 RGK Center/ARNOVA Presidents Award, and a 2009 campus Outstanding Junior Faculty Award.

Padraic Kenney, Adjunct Professor (History)
(Ph.D., University of Michigan, 1992)

I want to understand how groups of people and individuals without power manage, survive, resist, and protest in hostile environments. I have been particularly interested in the dynamics of communist societies, especially Poland. I have written on the experience of workers in early Communist Poland, on the gendered nature of anti-communist opposition, on social movements in the fall of communism in Central Europe, and on Eastern Europe's Road from communism. I have recently completed a book on political prisoners in the modern world, from the mid-nineteenth century to Guantanamo Bay. Research in Poland, South Africa, and Ireland allowed me to investigate whether there are common experiences in the political prisoner's cell that might help us to understand this loneliest of political protests. Courses I teach include several that center on the experience of communism or on political protest, as well as courses in Eastern European and Polish History. I have also taught and written on problems of transnational history, and on the role of historical memory in contemporary politics.

Adam Liff, Adjunct Assistant Professor (East Asian Languages & Cultures)
(Ph.D., Princeton University)

I research and teach on East Asian international relations, politics, and diplomacy- with a particular focus on contemporary security affairs in the Asia-Pacific region. My primary topical interests are Japanese and Chinese defense policy; the U.S.-Japan alliance; U.S. Asia-Pacific strategy; and the rise of China and its impact on East Asia and the world.

Sean Nicholson-Crotty, Adjunct Associate Professor (SPEA)
(Ph.D., Texas A&M University, 2003)

Dr. Sean Nicholson-Crotty joined O'Neill in 2013 and specializes in public management and federalism. He currently serves as director of the Ph.D. in Public Affairs and Joint Ph.D. in Public Policy Programs. His primary areas of research also include intergovernmental relations and the diffusion of public policies among subnational governments. He has published more than four dozen articles on these subjects in top public affairs and political science journals.

Before coming to O'Neill, Nicholson-Crotty spent nine years at the University of Missouri where he held a joint appointment in political science and the Truman School of Public Affairs. While there, he earned the Provost's Outstanding Junior Faculty Research and Creative Activity Award, presented annually to the most productive and prominent assistant professor at the university.

Research appointments prior to Missouri included the Public Policy Research Institute, the National Latino Project, and the Texas Educational Project at Texas A&M University where he received his doctorate in political science.

Steve Sanders, Adjunct Associate Professor (Law)
(A.B., Indiana University 1984, J.D., University of Michigan 2005)

Steve Sanders teaches Constitutional Law, Family Law, and Constitutional Litigation (the law of Section 1983 actions for constitutional torts). His scholarship focuses on questions arising out of the Fourteenth Amendment's guarantees of equal protection and due process, with a special focus on issues affecting LGBT persons and same-sex couples. His teaching has been recognized with an IU Trustees Teaching Award, and by vote of the law school's students as "Outstanding Interactive Professor." For 2016-17 he was designated the Henry H.H. Remak Distinguished Scholar by IU's Institute for Advanced Study. Sanders began his career as an administrative staff member at IU Bloomington, serving as assistant to the chancellor and assistant dean of the College of Arts Sciences. He then earned his J.D. from the University of Michigan, magna cum laude, where he was an articles editor on the law review and received the Bates Memorial Scholarship, the law school's highest award to graduating seniors. He clerked for the Hon. Terence T. Evans of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Sanders practiced for four years with the Supreme Court and appellate litigation group at Mayer Brown LLP in Chicago, where he became the firm's most-junior attorney to present a U.S. Supreme Court argument in a paid client matter. Before coming to the Law School in 2013, he taught at the University of Chicago Law School as a lecturer and at the University of Michigan Law School as a visiting assistant professor.

In addition to his scholarship and teaching, Sanders has participated in groundbreaking litigation. On behalf of the Human Rights Campaign, he co-authored an amicus brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in Obergefell v. Hodges (2015), which established nationwide marriage equality for gays and lesbians. A case he litigated in the Indiana Court of Appeals in 2013 led to the first published opinion by any court in the United States holding that a spouse's gender transition did not affect the validity of an existing marriage.

Sanders writes regularly for The Huffington Post, the American Constitution Society Blog, and SCOTUS Blog. He has appeared on MSNBC and public radio's To the Point, provides commentary and analysis for the radio show Bloomberg Law, and frequently is quoted by print and online news media on matters of constitutional law and the Supreme Court.

Jessica Steinberg, Adjunct Assistant Professor (International Studies)
(Ph.D., Political Science, University of Michigan, 2014)

Professor Steinberg researches Africa, India, and regions of limited state presence. She focuses on understanding the strategic dynamics in regions with limited state presence, given that for people in these areas, the relevant institution is not governmental but a firm, charity, or rebel group. Steinberg also studies regions where natural resources are extracted, areas of conflict, and areas where there is aid provision.
